Josh Spodek is the bestselling author of Leadership Step by Step: Become the Person Others Follow. Come learn how to navigate your business' greatest challenges (hint: it's your relationships with people), and let him show you how to make meaningful connections and become a leader in the environment.

Making connections is critical to building a career and a life—and a major challenge. Who hasn't gotten tongue-tied in front of an important person? Or taken a common piece of career advice and tried to network, only to give up after too many meaningless conversations?

In this program Josh will teach you how to create meaningful connections with anyone: from people you'd like to know socially to strangers at networking events to high-value people outside your social circle. You'll go away with:

- A method you can use to create meaningful connections, consistently, reliably, and predictably.
- The chance to practice so you can use it before leaving the room.
- A fun, interactive environment.
- A method that works for anyone—shy or gregarious, old or young, student or working professional.
- A skill you can practice all your life for both professional and personal development.

Josh is an Adjunct Professor at NYU, leadership coach and workshop leader for Columbia Business School, columnist for Inc., and founder of SpodekAcademy.com. He has led seminars in leadership, entrepreneurship, creativity, and sales at Harvard, Princeton, MIT, the New York Academy of Science, and in private corporations. He has been quoted and profiled in major media outlets and he holds five Ivy League degrees, including a PhD in Astrophysics and an MBA, and studied under a Nobel Prize winner.
